

This is a detailed cadastral map of a rural area in Germany. The map shows a network of land parcels, each identified by a unique number. A prominent red dashed line runs diagonally across the map, likely indicating a boundary or a specific land use zone. The map includes labels for various locations: Buschlach, Haagäcker, Dorfäcker, Steingebiß, Weingarten, and Weiherdeichl. The map is densely packed with parcel numbers and street names, providing a comprehensive view of the local land ownership and infrastructure. The map also shows various geographical features, including a river or stream on the left and a road on the right. The overall layout is a grid-like pattern of parcels, with some larger areas designated as Brache (barren land).
